

ABSTRACT

The invention pertains to devices for administering a liquid solution of an active substance, wherein the subject device has at least one associated temperature sensor.